NATSIHWA 2016
NATIONAL CONFERENCE

About NATSIHWA

The National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Worker Association (NATSIHWA) is the professional association for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Workers including Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander Health Practitioners in Australia.

NATSIHWA was established in 2009 following the Australian Government's announcement of funding to strengthen Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Workers and Health Practitioners as part of its 'Closing the Gap' initiatives. The creation of NATSIHWA is an important step in recognising the vital role that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Workers and Health Practitioners play in providing professional, effective and culturally respectful health services to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander individuals, families and communities across Australia.

Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander Health Workers and Health Practitioners are employed across the Aboriginal Community Controlled Health, Government, and private health sectors, working to achieve better health outcomes for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

Our vision

A strong, credible and viable National Association that is widely recognised for its cultural and professional integrity, and commitment to advocate for and support both current and future generations of Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander Health Workers and Health Practitioners.

Why you should participate

The NATSIHWA National Conference theme My Story, My Knowledge, Our Future will bring together 300 to 350 delegates and guests from all health sectors, students, medical practitioners and representatives from state and commonwealth governments and departments from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander and non-Indigenous backgrounds.
